

North Dakota

agMag

April 2006

A Magazine about Agriculture for North Dakota Students

soil

and

water conservation

The average household uses about 49 gallons of water per person per day.

Soil and water are essential for North Dakota's agriculture. Crops receive their nutrients from the soil, and livestock need lots of water to drink. In what other ways does agriculture use soil and water?

---

---

---

---

---

But we must protect these natural resources. Farmers and ranchers conserve their soil and water, and you can, too. List the ways you used water in the last 24 hours.

---

---

---

---

---

