Barley Production Information Available Online

Barley production information from the Barley Production and Management for Profit workshop held in Billings, Montana on January 13 is now available online. The presentations have been posted on the Institute of Barley and Malt Sciences (IBMS) website under the Education link at <http://www.ag.ndsu.edu/ibms/education.html>

Topics and speakers posted are: Fusarium Head Blight Management (Dr. Mary Burrows, Montana State University, Bozeman); Montana Wheat and Barley Committee (Kim Falcon, Executive Director, Great Falls); National Barley Growers Association (Dave Henderson, President, Cutbank); Barley Storage Information (Dr. Ken Hellevang, North Dakota State University), Barley Variety Information for 2010 (Dr. Ken Kephart, Southern Agriculture Research Center, Huntley) and Online Crop Decision and Selection Tool information (Dr. Kent McVay, Southern Agriculture Research Center, Huntley).

The workshop was attended by barley growers, industry representatives and barley research personnel from Montana and Wyoming. Sponsors of the program include the IBMS, the American Malting Barley Association, Anheuser-Busch, Inc., MillerCoors Brewing Company, USDA Barley Coordinated Agricultural Project and Barley for Rural Development, and Montana State University and North Dakota State University Extension Services. More workshops will be planned in Montana in 2011.
