A nation-wide company is looking for an assistant farm manager on the business side. An ideal person would have an agri-business degree with somewhat of a farm background. This person would be responsible for helping rent out the land, hiring agronomists, balancing the books, and other business tasks. The compensation will fall in the 40k-45k range, but they will pay for an individual to get their insurance and real estate license. The other benefit to a position like this is that the farm managers are near retirement, so two to three years down the rode a person could see a huge pay increase. There are four openings: Red River Valley, Central Iowa, Central Minnesota, and Western Nebraska. The company is very flexible on where a person lives within the territory.
