Dr. Gerald Stokka has been appointed to the board of directors for the North Dakota Cowboy Hall of Fame, filling the seat vacated by Willard Schnell, Dickinson.

Jerry is an associate professor of livestock stewardship in Animal Sciences at NDSU. Previously he was part of the Pfizer Animal Health Veterinary Technical Services and also operated the Cooperstown Veterinary Clinic.

Kim Vonnahme Named to International Committee – Greg Lardy

Kimberly Vonnahme, associate professor of animal science, has accepted an invitation to become an international member of Gravidia: National Centre for Growth and Development (www.gravidia.org.nz). Gravidia is a government-funded Centre of Research Excellence (CoRE) that brings together leading biomedical, clinical, and animal scientists from across New Zealand and around the world. The research conducted by Gravidia members seeks to reveal how conditions encountered in early life affect the way an individual grows and develops throughout life. The aim of Gravidia is to advance the understanding of the underlying processes involved in these changes and to measure their implications in human health and agricultural contexts, with a view to identifying their short- and long-term consequences for health and disease.

Kim was nominated by one of the principal investigator members of Gravidia and endorsed by the organization's Scientific Advisory Board; (<http://www.gravidia.org.nz/our-people/scientific-advisory-board/>). She will attend meetings of the International College of members in New Zealand every two years, assist in the supervision of postdoctoral fellows and Ph.D. students, and participate in individual research projects with members of Gravidia. She is currently a part of two research grants and looks forward to her interactions with members of Gravidia.
